The venue and ceremony sites are booked; now the vendor search begins. One of the most important vendors to book for your wedding is a photographer. The key is to find a photographer you will love because you'll be spending a lot of time with that person. If you are not sure where to start when it comes to interviewing your wedding photographer of choice, we have put together a guide for you to follow.

Availability:

- Is my wedding date available?
 - Will you be the one shooting my wedding? If not, can I meet the photographer who will be on-site?
 - How many weddings will you photograph that weekend?
 - Will you have any assistants with you on our wedding day?
- Tip – Some photographers always work with an assistant, while others determine if they need one based on the size of your event. Adding an assistant to your contract will most likely incur an additional fee.

Background Check:

- How long have you been shooting weddings? How many weddings have you photographed?
- Do you often shoot weddings are similar in size and style to the one we are planning?

Tip – Your photographer should visit the venue in advance to scout locations, familiarize him or herself with the layout and lighting, and determine any venue restrictions.

Style:

- How would you describe your photography style?
- Do you prefer to blend into the background to capture candid moments or do you like to be more visible and take charge to choreograph images?
- Do you shoot digitally? With film? Or both?

Pricing & Packages:

- What is included in your standard package?
- What add-ons do the more-expensive packages include?
- Can I customize a package to fit my needs?

Tip – Many photographers offer add-ons, from engagement sessions to albums, that will allow you to get the coverage that works best for you.

Prints & Albums:

- Can we order prints or albums directly from you?
- What type of album do you offer?
- Are albums or prints included in your packages?
- How many prints are included and what is the turnaround time?

Logistics:

- When will we receive the contract?

- How much of a deposit do you require?
- Do you accept payments in installments?
