

Jennifer Hansen Rolli: Enchanted by the young people of Bucks County . . .

by Rhonda Garland
Owner, Silverman Gallery

These are the paintings that people remember and talk about for years!

With the gallery since it opened in 2011, Jennifer Hansen Rolli is known for several things that she does exceedingly well: majestic skies over the Delaware, flowers in gardens or in delicate teacups, charismatic cows and of course, children. Growing up in Yardley, Jennifer began learning to work in oils under the tutelage of her father, Omar. Her work as a free-lance graphic artist led to painting in oils again once she and her husband Anthony had three young children at home.

With her children now grown and living in different parts of the country, Rolli still feels a deep connection to them, but also sees it as a new start for herself. "I don't just have to get in and out of paintings," she explains. "The hands-on part (of parenting) is over. There isn't that panic of having to get people to places on time."

"The absence of having kids running amok has given me a chance to run amok myself!"

Rolli's Bluebird in Shadow (detail below) and Innocent Composure (at right) are just part of her newest collection, BLUISH, on display through January 15th.

Two Boys Out on A Limb is a painting that truly resonated with her audience. It appealed to just about anyone that ever hung out with their siblings in the woods and any parent or grandparent of tow-headed boys. Gracing the cover of the spring 2017 issue of Bucks County Magazine it found a home with a Newtown family shortly thereafter.
