A Time for Tradition...

Karen Thompson founded Lace Silhouettes Lingerie in 1988 when she opened the flagship store in Peddler's Village in beautiful Bucks County. Thompson was passionate about creating an intimate apparel brand that went beyond the average shopping experience to truly satisfy what women want: personalized, knowledgeable service, a welcoming, comfortable environment, and affordable luxury that makes them feel beautiful and confident. She had a vision for a store where real women would experience a truly remarkable shopping environment and where every customer would be treated like a friend, as though they were "a guest in our home".

This remains the core concept of Lace Silhouettes Lingerie today. At Lace Silhouettes, they believe that every woman deserves to indulge herself regardless of age, size, or price range.

The holiday season is here, and with it comes endless family-fun traditions and memories. It's a time for family, giving, and spreading holiday cheer. With so much fun to be had, the season always seems to pass us by so quickly, which is why it is so important to soak up every second of it.

The holidays are filled with so many feel-good moments; from the warm glow of a decorated Christmas tree or menorah and the sinfully sweet aroma of fresh baked cookies wafting through the house, to the heart-warming taste of that first sip of eggnog that we long for all year long.

At the heart of the holiday season comes tradition, and so many families create their own fun and unique ways to celebrate, and pass them down from generation to generation. I wanted to share with you some of my favorite feel-good holiday traditions.

From my family to yours...

#1 Trimming the Tree

This is one of my personal favorites. As a kid, every year my family and I decorated the Christmas tree together and then had an indoor picnic dinner, in our pajamas, right next to it! It was always my favorite part of the holidays. It was our way of kicking off the season!

#2 Baking Cookies

There is always an endless supply of sweet treats at the holiday season. From sugar cookies and peanut butter blossoms, to competing to see who can decorate the cutest gingerbread man, nothing beats spending time with family in the kitchen (in my family, we have a bake-off; loser has to clean the kitchen!).

#3 Holiday Parties

Let's not forget about holiday parties filled with ugly Christmas sweaters, singing along to Mariah Carey's "All I Want for Christmas Is You" as loud as you can with your family and friends, and drinking festive holiday cocktails! My family and friends love to do a Christmas pajama party sleepover! We all wear Christmas pajamas and stay up all night watching holiday movies and sipping on spiked eggnog!

#4 The Magic of Holiday Lights

Every year, my girlfriends and I get together and plan a trip to Peddler's Village to see their incredible holiday lights! Nothing puts me in the holiday spirit more, and their lights truly are a magical sight to see (if you have never been before, it is an absolute must-see!). We stroll through the village laughing, catching up on life, and taking in the sights while sipping on wine and attempting to shop for holiday gifts (we usually end up finding lots of treasures for ourselves, too!).

#5 Christmas Eve PJs

When I was growing up, and even still today, we always open one gift on Christmas Eve. That gift is always a pair of Christmas pajamas! We open our PJs and immediately change into them! After, we all sit by the fire and stuff our faces with cookies until we can't take one more bite, reminiscing about our favorite moments of the season.

The holiday season is a time for tradition, whether it's continuing those traditions passed down from generation to generation or starting new ones. Live in the moment and cherish every second of it!
