

THINGS TO CONSIDER WHEN CHOOSING A HOME REMODELER

If you are considering remodeling your home, selecting a home remodeler can be overwhelming. All contractors must have both a PA contractor number and insurance, as well as some type of credible or reputable group that they belong to, such as NARI (National Association of the Remodeling Industry) or the BBB (Better Business Bureau).

You also need to verify that the remodeler's credentials are legitimate. How long have they been in business? Are they just a management type contractor that subcontracts everything out to others? You should be wary of subcontractors coming and going and of the third-party websites that supposedly connect homeowners with contractors. Unfortunately, most are just taking lead money from one or both parties.

Reputable contractors will have a good list of past customers to use as references, so you can call and confirm information about their experience. If a white van randomly shows up at your home and you find yourself talking to someone about a special sale or promotion, you should become concerned. Often, the info they provide is false, and they are just looking for a quick buck. Reliable contractors don't go door to door or call your home looking for work.

You should seek out a contractor – not the other way around. Good contractors play by the rules, have the proper credentials, and are up to date with their license and insurance. No insurance, no license, no contract, period.

Coleman Home Remodeling has been in business since 1993, serving Bucks and Montgomery Counties. We have an above-standard reputation based on quality and craftsmanship. Our team cares about customers' critiques. We believe that no project is completely finished until the customer is satisfied, and we strive to go above and beyond that bottom line.

We enjoy our work and the satisfaction we can deliver for our customers. We have extensive experience with many products and design work. We use a 3-D CAD drawing and design suite, so your projects can be viewed and altered before the final look is achieved. We measure carefully to ensure a good final result. Our installations are done with quality materials, and we work with many excellent local vendors you can visit to help make selections that will ensure your project turns out the way you envisioned it.

We follow safety guidelines when working in your home, are careful around your belongings, and make sure we leave the space clean. We give you the insurance certificate to hold while we work in your home.

Coleman Home Remodeling has an extensive picture portfolio of kitchen, bathroom, basement refinishing, addition, and garage projects we've completed, as well as thank-you letters from previous and repeat customers. In addition, we've been interviewed by local advertisement magazines about our company and what to look for in selecting good-quality contractors.

Your home is your greatest asset. If you invest in it wisely, it will hold its value. At Coleman Home Remodeling, we can help you do that, by handling your next home remodeling project from start to finish. Give us a call at 215-721-4431.
