

Placing Health Front and Center

You've Got MAIDS of Quakertown & Lehigh Valley helps you prioritize health with a clean and sanitized home and office

Owner, Elsa O'Brien

After a challenging couple of months, our businesses are finally beginning to reopen and we are able to become a little freer to visit and enjoy each other's company. As we embrace these steps towards normalcy, one thing is on the top of everybody's mind: staying healthy.

For You've Got MAIDS of Quakertown and Lehigh Valley, that's not a new focus. We have always believed that clean homes and offices are healthier for the people who live and work there. And we have built our business using techniques and products that support that dedication to health.

Long before environmentally friendly products were so widely used, we made a commitment to them, because we believe that cleaning should remove unhealthy elements from your space—not add toxins. We also made the commitment to using equipment scientifically engineered not just to make your home or office look great but also to help rid it of allergens and germs. Our industrial-strength HEPA vacuums are designed to remove nearly all dirt, dust, contaminants, and allergens, and our cleaning cloths pick up and eliminate almost all dirt, bacteria, and germs.

The recent health crisis has led us to deepen our already-strong commitment to your health and safety. We have implemented new policies and procedures and even added new technologies, which are helping keep homes germ-free and helping business reopen and stay open with confidence that they are providing as safe an experience as possible for their customers.

Here are just a few of the ways we're rising to the challenge of helping you enjoy homes and businesses that are as healthy as they are clean and beautiful:

Your Cleaning Crew

Your dedicated team of Maids is now following new protocols to ensure their time in your home or office is safe and supportive of everyone's health. Maids now arrive at our office in staggered shifts and undergo a health check before getting changed from their clothes into their uniform for the day. In addition to the gloves they've always worn, they now also wear—and replace between each location—masks with filters and single-use booties. At the end of their day, our Maids leave their uniforms here for us to wash and disinfect. We never send Maids out to work if they are exhibiting symptoms or feeling unwell, and we check with customers before arriving to make sure no one at the location has been ill either.

Our Vehicles & Equipment

We thoroughly clean every car each night and disinfect high-touch areas between each assignment. We've also revamped our system for disinfecting cleaning equipment, bagging all of the equipment for each location in advance. When they are done being used, they are placed in a sanitizer bucket to be cleaned and disinfected overnight. Most importantly, all of our cleaning products are approved for fighting the virus, giving you the deepest, most thorough clean possible.

New Technology

We're excited to be adding a new piece of equipment to our capabilities. The electrostatic sprayer uses hospital-grade disinfectant that has the highest classification from the CDC. The sprayer has a wide reach, which means we can cover and completely sanitize large areas very quickly. We use the electrostatic sprayer in our own offices as well as with clients. Its power as a disinfecting technology makes it perfect for cleaning homes where someone has been sick or for businesses seeking to provide their customers with as clean and safe an experience as possible.

For almost a decade, the families and businesses in the community that we love being a part of have trusted us to keep their homes and offices sparkling clean, healthy, and welcoming. We've been so honored to deliver that with customized, expert cleans carried out by our Maids—all of whom are fully insured and bonded and professionally trained to give the highest-quality service.

It's our privilege now to help our community reopen and thrive again by supporting you in keeping your homes and business not only dust and dirt free but also as germ free as possible.
